On April 3rd, 2019, the “SURGICAL ENDOVASCULAR CAROTID ADVANCED COURSE” was held in Verona, in cooperation with the ICLO training and research centre. In particular, the goal of the course – led and organized by Dr. L.Garriboli in cooperation with Prof. M. Antonello, Dr. E. Chisci, and Dr. G.B. Parlani – was to improve knowledge, through fresh cadaver anatomical dissection, of the most common surgical and endovascular techniques used in carotid surgery.

The practical phase was preceded by a theoretical phase conducted by tutors, by means of presentations and videos of their everyday practice.

Moreover, participants were given the chance to utilize an angioplasty and carotid stenting operation simulator.

The course featured young vascular surgeons or surgeon trainees who required an advanced level technical tune-up.

Grants for registration to the course were funded by:

- Universities (University of Rome, University of Padua, University of Siena)
- Companies (LeMaitre, Cardinal, Cordis, Selefar)
- Hospitals (Santa Croce e Carle Hospital, Cuneo)
- Collegio Nazionale dei Primari Ospedalieri di Chirurgia Vascolare (Italian organization of head physicians in vascular surgery - 2 grants)

Only two of the participants registered and paid for the course directly.

The course lasted 1 day, with a large amount of time dedicated to practice.

Before accessing the course, the participants filled out an initial assessment form, and based upon the answers given they were divided by the tutors into 4 groups, each with a different level of preparation: 4 participants per cadaver.

Each group had a tutor of reference, who guided the participants throughout the exercise, though always granting them a great deal of independence.

The following conclusions emerged:

- A very interesting course, which would be worth dedicating two days so as to look more in depth at all its theoretical and practical aspects.
- In terms of the practical part, the division in homogeneous groups was well-appreciated, in that it allowed all the participants to improve and develop their skills, regardless of the starting point.
- In the course evaluation forms, "Excellent" and "Very useful" were the most popular terms to describe the Tutors and Course respectively.
